INTRODUCTORY.

In compiling this volume, it has been the aim of the author to gather the genealogical history of the WILDBORE family in all its branches, using as a starting point, the earliest known resident of the name in this country, Samuel Wildbore, of whom the first authentic account we have is that he was admitted to the First Church of Boston, on the records of which is to be found the following: "Sam. Wildbore, with his wife, Ann, was admitted to this church, Dec. 1, 1633." He had married in England, Ann Bradford, the daughter of Thomas Bradford, of Doncaster, in Yorke County, or Yorkshire, (see Bradford's Will, Nov. 1, 1607). Ann was the mother of his children.

Samuel Wildbore was admitted as Freeman of Boston, March 4, 1634, (see Boston Records). He was the owner of considerable property in the town of Taunton, Mass., and likewise possessed holdings in Boston, evidently dividing his place of residence between the two places. In November, 1637, he was one of a party that was banished from the colony on account of religious views which they held in variance with those held by the ruling majority of the colony. Acting upon the advice of Roger Williams, he with the others fled to Providence, where they negotiated the purchase of the Island of Aquednek (now Rhode Island) from the Narragansett Indians and early in 1638 he moved his family to the new location.

March 7, 1638, these eighteen persons founded, by solemn compact, a new colony, (see History of Rhode Island).

The following is a record of a purchase of land by the colonists from the Indians, "Quassaquanch, Kachanaquant and Quequaquenue, Chief Sachems of the Narragansetts, sold to Samuel Wildbore, John Hull of Boston, (Goldsmith), John Porter, Samuel Wilson and Thomas Mumford, the large tract of land which was called 'The Petaquompscot Purchase.' "

In 1645 Samuel returned to Boston and later built an iron furnace at Taunton, the first in New England. He was clerk of the town board in 1638; constable in 1639; sergeant in 1644.

Samuel Wildbore's second wife was Elizabeth Lechford, widow of Thomas Lechford. The date of the death of his wife, Ann, likewise the date of his subsequent marriage to Elizabeth are not given.

"Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Wildbore, was admitted to this church Nov. 29, 1645." (Records of First Church of Boston.)

Samuel died July 24, 1656. His will dated April 30, 1656, was probated Nov. 6, 1656. The widow, Elizabeth, and his son, Shadrach, were named as executors.

His widow, Elizabeth Wildbore, married Henry Bishop, Dec. 20, 1656. Bishop died in 1664 and Elizabeth, probably about July, 1665.

This brings us to the answer of the question, "What family did Samuel Wildbore leave?" This question has caused a great deal of earnest discussion and research among the members of the family, and up to this time it still remains unanswered to the entire satisfaction of the writer.

Asa Wilbur, of Boston, in his "Wilbur Family" (1871) says that he "left four sons, Samuel, Jr., Joseph, William and Shadrach, and probably a daughter named Sarah." Neither William nor Sarah are mentioned in Samuel's will and there is no doubt that Asa Wilbur confused Sarah, he referred to, with a granddaughter of the same name.

Samuel Wildbore's will mentions "eldest son, Samuel, son, Joseph and youngest son, Shadrach, so that there is no question as to these; as to William there is a difference of opinion as to the relationship between he and Samuel. Asa Wilbur (Wilbur Family, 1871) for reasons without any substantiating evidence places William as a son, while Josiah H. Drummond, (A Beginning of a Genealogy of the Wilbur Family) declines to make a definite decision, calling attention to the fact that Samuel, Jr.'s will, dated in 1678, leaves a legacy to "my cousin, Wm. Wildbore, Sr." and cites this as quite conclusive evidence that William Wildbore was a nephew of Samuel, Sr. The opposite sides in the controversy find facts and theories on which to base an argument supporting their contentions, but in no case has the writer seen or heard of any evidence conclusive to him of the correctness of either view.

In this connection I may add that a story has been given to me, the facts of which I have been unable to verify, but which, if true would account for the closeness of William to Samuel's family and firmly establish his relations as a nephew.

The story was: "That a colony of English emigrants, among whom were some families of Wildbores, landed on the coast of Maine, near the site of the present city of Portland about 1616." The supposition being that Samuel and his brother with their families were the Wildbores referred to.

"Shortly after the landing of the Plymouth colony, the remaining members of the Maine colony, their numbers having been depleted by death, joined the Plymouth colony." The further theory being that William was the only remaining child of the brother's family and being a mere child, Samuel took him into his family, where he lived and grew up upon the same footing as Samuel's own children. As previously stated I have been unable to verify any of the above and while it is plausible I am unwilling to accept it without some supporting evidence. The date of Samuel's landing in this country or of his departure from England are uncertain. He was in Boston as early as 1633. He died in 1656. He was undoubtedly fifty years of age at the time of this first record.

It seems immaterial whether William was a son or a nephew of Samuel, except so far as it might give a clue to the circumstances surrounding the emigration of the family to America. That William was a member of Samuel's family and occupied the same place as one of his own sons is generally conceded and so to all intents and purposes he was a son and I have so regarded him, trusting that future investigation will bring out facts that will settle all points now in question.

Samuel's family, then, consisted of four sons, William and Shadrach being the two from whom the numerous families of Wilbors, Wilburs, Wilbers, Wilbars, Wilbours and Wilboures, in this country have descended.

It is almost certain that nearly all, whether using the one or the other way of spelling the name, are descendants of one of the two families, although the Wilbors seem to be confined to the William branch, while the other spellings are used by families in both branches. The name, originally WILDBORE, seems to have been modified by the generation following Samuel, senior, to Wilbore, from there down it has been repeatedly changed sometimes as many as four changes being found in one family.

Many members of the family have claimed relationship to the Wilberforce family of England. This is, in my opinion in all cases erroneous and I have been able in several cases to show it to be so.

The William branch, it appears, settled more thickly in Rhode Island, Little Compton in that state being the birthplace of many of the family.

It is said that at one time there were only two votes cast at the elections in that township that were not Wilbors.

The Shadrach branch centered in and around Taunton, Mass., and from that place emigrated to different parts of the country. As to the writer's immediate ancestors, my grandfather was born and died and is buried in Little Compton, although he was a resident of New York State at the time of his death, he being in Little Compton on a visit. My father was a native of New York State, while I was born in Wisconsin.

In closing this introductory sketch, it is well to state that it is not to be assumed that the work is complete, nor is it absolutely correct.

The data has been gathered from a great many sources, varied in character and further research, both on the part of the writer and by those that have furnished data on their respective families may make changes that will make the present work more complete and possibly more correct in important particulars. It is the earnest desire of the writer that should any omissions or errors be discovered that he may be advised, that subsequent editions may be just as complete and as correct as our combined efforts can make them.

To those branches of the family whose ancestors had for any reason adopted a different spelling than "Wilbor," an explanation is due. The author has throughout this work used the one way of spelling for the sole purpose of simplifying the work.

In the beginning it was the intention to preserve the spelling as it was and is now in each family, but as the work progressed different spellings were received frequently from closely related members of the same family, from this fact it was evident that there was a great chance for the spelling to be, if not incorrectly, unsatisfactorily given.

The writer concedes to each member of the family, the right to that spelling as best suits his family tree and has no controversy with those who for any reason do not spell the name as his ancestors did. In fact it is a matter in which the present generation has had but little voice.

To those of the family who have assisted me in gathering the data herein contained, I extend my hearty thanks and it is due to them as much as myself that it has been possible to bring this work to the present point.

It is a matter of regret that it has been impossible to secure the data necessary to complete many branches of the family and also to include many families from whom I have received sketches, but who are unable to trace their lineage to a point where it would connect with the family at-large.

I shall continue to carry along the work as far as my time will permit, and trust, that with the co-operation of other members of the family to be able to make the next edition of this work much more complete.
